

Glenbard School District deploys UnlimitedFTP for student drives

UnlimitedFTP provides easy to use file-transfer solution for high school students

The Glenbard School District had an urgent need for a central online repository for students to store their files. This system had to be easily accessible by students from anywhere inside the school as well as the outside. The main premise was to give students personal storage space to save their files and folders. In this manner, students could work on any machine on the computer network and still have access to all their homework, class assignments and lab work. The school district also wanted the same files to be made available to students working from home.

To provide such a system, Glenbard School District turned to Unlimi-Tech Software. Unlimi-Tech Software provides UnlimitedFTP, the world's first web-based FTP client. Through UnlimitedFTP, Glenbard was looking to provide simple, easy, web-based FTP access to the students' storage space. UnlimitedFTP is a full-fledged FTP client that runs on a JAVA enabled web browser, such as Internet Explorer or Netscape. This simplicity is what makes UnlimitedFTP a very powerful and unique solution in the marketplace. Through UnlimitedFTP, the Glenbard School District allows students to upload and download their files from anywhere, inside the school or from home. Students are given 50 MB of personal network storage space to save homework assignments, lab reports and other school related documents.

Because UnlimitedFTP is a JAVA™ based solution, it can be run on any web-browser supporting JAVA™ plug-ins. This makes it best-suited for a school environment where students access the network using PCs, MACs and UNIX systems. UnlimitedFTP's ability to operate as a full-fledged FTP client makes it possible for students to upload, download and rename files with a click of a button. The newly introduced web-storage is a success at the school district where nearly 9,000 students have access to it on a daily basis.

“Our students have grown up using web browsers. UnlimitedFTP helps utilize their prior knowledge to transfer files simply though a familiar web interface.”
